A novel method of synthesis of 1,2- and 1,3-aminoaldimides using the combination of aldehyde, malononitrile and imidates was described. This approach can be used for the preparation of aminoaldimides with substituents (such as benzoyl and acetyl, etc.) and aldehydes with substituents (such as phenylacetaldehyde and para-methoxyphenylacetaldehyde, etc.) at N-1 or C-1 position. Therefore, the imidate moiety provides a general and convenient means for the facile construction of aldimides. Furthermore, the aldimide can undergo regio- and stereoselective aldol reactions with some 2-deoxy and 2,3-unsaturated imidates to afford 5- or 6-membered imine-fused heterocyclic scaffolds in moderate to good yield with good stereoselectivities.Pharmacokinetics of isosorbide dinitrate and isosorbide-5-mononitrate in dogs. Pharmacokinetic studies were performed in 5 adult Beagle dogs of 1.0 mg/kg isosorbide-5-mononitrate (IS-5-MN) and 3.0 mg/kg isosorbide dinitrate (ISDN) by 2.5-micrograms/kg IM injection. Blood samples were collected and analyzed by HPLC. After ISDN the mean (+/- SEM) time to reach maximum
