planned to do a steam release, but the.Q: Using HAML (Ruby), how to remove the :while and :end end tags? I am fairly new to HAML. I am just getting used to removing the :end and :while tags. :while do_something :something :else outputs as do_something something else But I need do_something something else I've tried do_something something :else outputs as do_something something else But it has just removed the :do_something end tag. Is there a way to write this so the do_something end tag is removed?
Thanks! A: I can't say I've ever come across an example of this, but I'm sure there is a way. The doc for the while/end says: The while tag will always be closed if the :else tag is present. If you want to close it anyway, simply omit the :else argument. So, to answer your question: `%div{:id => 'foo'} do_something` something `%div{:id => 'foo'} :else do_something else` produces: `do_something do_something` That should do it for you. Memphis Harts The Memphis Harts are a
