Andrey Bazhenov and Vitaly Elistratov traveled there during their round-the-world expedition. They were under the impression that "nothing bad" could happen to them, because of the presence of personnel at the base. "It was unbearable," Bazhenov told RT's Ruptly video agency, describing the damage that was done. "It was critical!" It's a miracle that neither Russian nor foreign participants in the expedition were injured. The members of the expeditions' team were forced to leave the place in a hurry, because they were afraid of getting ambushed by rebels. On June 11, a battle between the insurgents and the government forces was raging in the densely populated southern city of Misrata in Libya. According to reports, three people, including a child, were wounded in the clashes. "We were in the south part of the country. I don't know exactly
