[The dependence of the accuracy of ultrasound examination on the examiner's experience]. The purpose of the study was to evaluate the experience of an operator of an ultrasound examination in the assessment of the thickness of the placenta's membranes in different situations of pregnancy. The total group consisted of 352 pregnant women. The examiner had received a three-month training. In the first half of examination the examiner assessed the thickness of the placenta's membranes in situations where this parameter was normal. In the second half of examination the examiner assessed the thickness of the placenta's membranes in situations where the parameter had pathologic values. The assessment of the thickness of the placenta's membranes was confirmed by transabdominal and transvaginal ultrasound examinations. Ultrasound examination was performed in the first trimester of pregnancy. The error of assessment of the thickness of the placenta's membranes was estimated. The course of the examination was analysed. A normal thickness of the placenta's membranes was observed in 95
