It is designed for people who want to create and process 3D images not only in 2D, but in 3D. And indeed, it is very easy to learn, has handy tools for work, is quite clear and has a clear interface. And so, here's how you can work with it. Program interface The program has a simple interface and to understand it is not difficult. The program window is divided into two working windows. The left window displays a list of addresses. In the right window the path is displayed (from the list of addresses), on which you need to click to see the search result. If you need to select several addresses in the left window (by long clicking on the arrow between the addresses), the right window will display a tooltip (one value for each address you select). In the window that opens there will be information about each site found in the left window. When you click "Create" in the right window the search result will appear for the address found in the left part. If you need to select several addresses in the right window (by long pressing on the arrow between the addresses), the tooltip will appear in the left window (one value for each selected address). In the window that opens there will be information about each site found in the right window. If you click on "Create" in the left window, the search result will open for the address found in the right window. fffad4f19a
