Synopsis Satya is a simple village man who is very attached to his wife. His wife Savitri is a very simple woman who does not have much expectations from life and just wants her husband to be happy. Their only son, Siddharth, is a spoiled brat who hates his father and wife. Despite not getting the son's love, Satya and Savitri still stay together. Savitri tries to be the perfect housewife but she always fails. Meanwhile, Savitri's friend, Parvati, does not approve of the couple and thinks that they should get divorced. However, Savitri does not listen to Parvati. The eldest daughter of the family is Pooja. Satya has a good friend in the form of a dog called Roy. However, one day, their friendship is strained when he is framed by Parvati's brother, Kaal. Kaal starts to torture the dog and tries to kill him. Savitri comes to know about this and gets very angry. After some time, Savitri tries to kill Kaal, but in a twist of events, Savitri is killed by Kaal and Roy takes the blame for it. Seeing his wife's death, Satya decides to leave his family and start a new life. He decides to leave the village but gets caught by Kaal, who chases him. With the help of his friend, Roy, Satya finally escapes, but Roy is later killed by Kaal. Satya then leaves for Mumbai. In Mumbai, he starts his own business and tries to change his life. Satya stays in a hotel. On the other side, Savitri's sister and her son are killed by Kaal, who is also after Satya. Satya tries to figure out the reason behind his family's death and also why Parvati has no respect for him. He finds out that he is adopted, and so is Parvati.
