Q: How to tell if the `TableViewController` is visible? I have two `TableViewController`s in my app, let's call them the `MainTableViewController` and the `SecondTableViewController`. When the `SecondTableViewController` is opened, it hides the `MainTableViewController` and I want to be able to call a function in the `MainTableViewController` when the `SecondTableViewController` is closed. So basically I want to be able to tell if the `SecondTableViewController` is visible or not. Any thoughts?

controller by looking at the gastric cancer: is it safe? Laparoscopic gastrectomy was performed in 18 cases of gastric cancer (three cases of early gastric cancer, 14 cases of advanced gastric cancer). There were no mortalities in this series. The mean blood loss and mean operation time were 658.7 ml and 222.1 min respectively. The mean time to first flatus was 1.2 days, the mean time to first liquid diet was 2.2 days, and the mean time to oral intake was 3.4 days. Only two of the patients received only partial oral intake. The most frequent complications were intraperitoneal hemorrhage (seven cases), pulmonary edema (three cases), and pneumonia (three cases). The short-term outcomes were similar to those of laparotomy. However, four of 18 patients (22.2%) developed anastomotic leakage. The long-term results were not significantly different from those of the control group. Therefore, laparoscopic gastrectomy can be performed safely with no increased morbidity or mortality.
