APS Designer and the Portable Document Format (PDF) combine their efforts to provide an inexpensive, cross-platform way to produce consistent document production. Adobe Systems can be used to output PNG images and PDF files to the web. But Adobe Systems requires a lot of system resources to do so. Therefore, we have optimized Adobe Systems to be light on the resources and easy to use. We call this the "Adobe Systems Lightweight Edition". You can get a copy of this lightweight edition from download.aps.org. After converting an Adobe Systems PDF file to a PNG or BMP image file, the software does the following: 2. Validate Adobe Systems checks the data from the file to make sure it's correct. 3. Generate a Web page The program generates a Web page containing the PNG image. It includes a link to your web site and a "free" download page if you have chosen to distribute this edition. 4. Save the PNG file The program saves the PNG image on your computer. You can then use this image in your web pages. 5. Save the PDF file The program saves the Adobe Systems PDF file to your hard drive. You can then open this PDF file to edit it with Adobe Systems software. Adobe Systems Lightweight Edition is an exciting new way to view Adobe Systems PDF files on the Web. What's new in Adobe Systems Lightweight Edition? Adobe Systems Lightweight Edition contains the following improvements: It's easy to learn and use. Just follow the prompts to create your Web pages and test them before publishing. A big improvement in performance. The program is now faster and lighter on the system's resources. It's easy to find your Adobe Systems Lightweight Edition cache (which stores your image and PDF files) on your hard drive. You can then access your Web pages directly from this cache, without the need to re-download them. It's easy to manage your images and PDF files. Once you've converted them to Web pages, you can simply email them to your web site. You don't need to open an Adobe Systems program to view them. It's easy to share your Web pages. You can copy the link to your Web pages from the "save" button. f3e1b3768c
