Umbilical cord prolapse is seen in 0.5-0.9 per cent of normal pregnancies and is one of the leading causes of uterine rupture in the second trimester of pregnancy. It is characterized by external appearance of the protruding fetal part of the umbilical cord within or near the external cervical os. Only about half the cases are caused by a 'true' cord prolapse and the rest are caused by intrauterine migration of the cord. It occurs following a complete or partial "uncoiling" of the umbilical cord near term. Cord prolapse is present from the early second trimester and late second trimester is the most common. Rupture is associated with the presence of amniotic bands, a thickened uterine cervix and failure to progress at term. Labor pains should be used in predicting impending cord prolapse as far as possible.Q: How to make a dictionary with duplicates sorted in Python I have a dataframe like this: ID Class Ind Position Length 0 1 2 0.6 1 0 1 1 1 0.3 0 0 2 1 1 0.2 1 0 3 1 1 0.2 1 0
