IPC 1860 in Marathi, The Indian Penal Code, 1860]). Mentioned in the Indian Penal Code-1973 (English) Russian. "the right to just punishment" (eng. "equitable punishment") is given as a standard reference in modern criminal law in other countries, according to which they are considered applicable to acts committed by the accused.[2] Indian tradition attaches great importance to the observance of "human rights" in punishment for a crime. This right is considered as part of the general constitution of the country, which is called Graj-eyam. "The right to just punishment", "the empire of the West", according to many Indian jurists, is an infringement on universal human dignity (at least on the part of those who are trying to extend their influence to India).[5][6] In the development of this clause of the Indian constitution, the Constitution of India was adopted in 1990, which is advisory in nature, however, according to Indian lawyers, it establishes as a fundamental principle the principles of protecting "human dignity" (the right to life) and "the quality of human life", in including the possibility of the death penalty.[7] This article about India is a stub.
