I have a list of lists where i have a values: (1, 1,'something1','something2','something3') (2,2,'something4','something5','something6) Now i want to get a string from the above so i can use it, so i used: txt = '[0], [1], [2], {3}]'.format(1, 1,'something1','something2','something3') but is gives output of [1, 1,'something1','something2','something3'] how do i remove the double quotes and keep the space? I do not want to use string formatting, i want to use the list to keep a record of the data that are in it and then use those elements in a jupyter notebook as a table. I also tried using numpy.genfromtxt but it gives me an error, not understanding why: File "C:\Users\Alyssa\Desktop\First Date\arraycounts.py", line 16, in values = np.genfromtxt('values.txt', delimiter=',', dtype=str,skiprows=6) File "C\
