Photoshop is a powerful, sophisticated and popular graphics editing software. Photoshop was initially developed by the Digital Equipment Corporation in 1987. It was purchased by Adobe in 2003. Although Photoshop is available in both a basic and a professional version, most people use the professional version to design websites and graphics. The various stages of an image are called layers. The image on top of the layer is the background and the lower layers are built on top. One layer can hold an image (jpg, jpeg, png, gif, or tif) or a selection of an image. We can also add shapes and layers to shape the image. This is how we can create various effects. Photoshop is the first choice for most graphic designers. What's New in the?

Cyclic AMP induces phosphorylation of p34cdc2 and G2/M arrest in MC3T3-E1 osteoblasts. The presence of p34cdc2 and cyclin B1 was examined in proliferating and preosteoblastic MC3T3-E1 cells by immunoblotting with antibodies to p34cdc2 and cyclin B1. Phosphorylation of p34cdc2 and decrease in cyclin B1 levels were greater in preosteoblastic than in proliferating cells.

Phosphorylation of p34cdc2 and decrease in cyclin B1 levels were maximal by 3 days in MC3T3-E1 cells cultured in the presence of beta-glycerophosphate. A new cell cycle-specific phosphorylation of p34cdc2 was identified as p34cdc2 (pp34cdc2). The effect of elevated intracellular cyclic AMP levels on expression and phosphorylation of p34cdc2 and cyclin B1 was also examined. Upon stimulation of MC3T3-E1 cells with forskolin, cyclic AMP levels, p34cdc2 phosphorylation, and decrease in cyclin B1 levels occurred with a time course similar to that observed in preosteoblastic cells. Treatment of MC3T3-E1 cells with cell-permeable cyclic AMP analogues also elicited similar results as those seen with forskolin. The results from the present study demonstrate for the first time that cyclic AMP may be a novel and important signal for control of the G2/M transition in skeletal cells.

Q: Passing variables to boost::asio::io_service::run

I'm using boost::asio to build a networking app. A thing I'm trying to do is run a thread when an incoming packet is ready. The thread itself would have a loop like this:

while(true) { // do stuff // received a message, tell the app here // keep looping }

Here is the documentation for io_service::run() (for the BOOST_ASIO thread class).

void io_service::run() { do_run(); while(m_io_service.run_one() == false);
