Let's just say I have a form that has input type="file" and I want it to accept both.pdf and.doc files, but I want to do this in one POST request. It's pretty obvious why I would want to do this, but I'm curious if this would work, and if it would be a bad practice. I'm getting this error when I try something along these lines, I'm just not sure if it's possible. My Website

It can take hours, years, or even decades, but I've seen it happen time and time again with friends. And recently I've noticed a trend with some of them, a growing desire to be creative. A desire to cultivate their own voice, their own way of expressing themselves. When I heard about this, I knew exactly what they were trying to do. Just recently, I was reading an interview with the incredible poet Jody Cundy about her upcoming project with photographer Paul Burton, Project88. She was talking about doing the project as a gift to herself, but also as a gift to the world. One goal for this project is to start a conversation. Something sparked in me. What if this was me? What if this was me? A day later, I'd found myself at the office doing my daily work, but thinking about what I'd seen. And I decided that I needed to pay more attention to what was going on in my life. That I should learn to explore this part of myself more. To help me navigate my creative side, get to know me, so to speak. I don't know what this will look like. I know this whole path is uncharted, there's no map. I just know that I'll learn a lot along the way and love the exploration. And maybe I'll even learn a thing or two about myself.Comparative analysis of the noninvasive scoring methods to predict the presence of coronary artery disease and to identify the presence of left ventricular dysfunction. Scanning electron microscopy was used to study the surface morphology of the blastomeres of early frog (Xenopus laevis) embryos. The smallest blastomere, a 256-cell morula, had cell surfaces which appeared less convoluted, showing less protrusions, and more "tennis-rack-shaped." The blastomeres of early gastrulae were larger than those of morulae and had more convoluted surfaces. The periderm and surface morphology of the blastomeres were studied by transmission electron microscopy. The blastocoelar surface of the morula blastomere formed a meshwork of collagenous fiber bundles of varying thickness. The peridermal surface of the morula blastomere, however, was smooth and irregular, forming a layer of sheet-like structures. Both the periderm and the blastocoelar surface of the blastula blastomere were densely covered with microvilli. The blastocoelar surface of the blastula blastomere was formed into interdigitating ridges, with the sinusoidal contour, and there were projections of blastocoelar surface into the blast
