useful tool to synchronize folders (if you've got the knowledge for doing so) "The first step to get rid of any problem is to know what the problem is." As I recently faced a problem with my newly installed XP, and I couldn't find any possible software to resolve my problem, I decided to use the myEasySync tool that can perform the following functions: Establish the connection (Clipboard is supported as a "source" folder) Set the target folder The target folder can be a folder on my computer, FTP Server, a network share, and the clipboard. If you have an FTP Server on your computer or networked environment, you may want to backup your computer's content to an FTP server or a file server. myEasySync can do this for you, even when you can't access the server directly. As I can't access my C:\Music folder from my mobile computer or when I'm on another network at the moment, I decided to backup this folder to my networked office folder. Here's how myEasySync did it: Select "This computer" as a "source" folder Select my networked office folder as a "target" folder. Also, select if the copy is performed as "current" mode or "backup" mode. The myEasySync copies the files from the source folder to the target folder. Once the process is finished, a shortcut will be created on your desktop. WARNING: myEasySync has a function that deletes all files that exist in the target folder but not in the source folder. These files are not moved to the trashcan and cannot easily be restored. Please read the manual, make sure you understand all functions, and consider trying the program on some unimportant files before you use it to backup your data In addition to synchronizing files, myEasySync can also backup your entire computer to the target folder. In "backup" mode, it will search for all items on your computer (mainly found files and folders). Once it finds all the items, it will copy them to your target folder. At the startup, you can select if your entire computer should be copied or only some of its contents. There's a "test copy" button on the window that allows you to test all the items that have been copied. It is expected that the size
