Players can now run, move, pass, shoot, dribble, tackle and defend at the highest intensity level, not only improving the realism of the game but also allowing gamers to take full advantage of key match details like team tactics and referee calls. "The addition of HyperMotion, along with new animations and ball physics, is a benchmark of innovation and gameplay. A tribute to the intensity and passion of the real football," said Peter Moore, President of EA SPORTS. New animations and ball physics for the new motion capture technology allow players to run, move, pass, shoot, dribble, tackle and defend at the highest intensity level. This year, FIFA 22 introduces a new gameplay experience with Hybrid Pro Clubs. Players can train using either the Pro Club created from its system, or a new Pro Club created from the system's Pro Player model. This customization option allows players to choose between a highly trained player on a team, or a player that can be molded to their style of play. FIFA 22 will be available to retail and digital on July 2, 2017. FIFA 22, the world's #1 football game, celebrates 20 years of the iconic global game. Since the debut of FIFA in August 1997, it has sold over 100 million copies and continued to attract millions of new players every year since. FIFA's global fan base is now more connected than ever through its dedicated community on social media and the official FIFA channels, as well as through weekly in-game competitions on FIFA.com and all official mobile apps. Additionally, interactive promotions like FIFA Ultimate Team and the annual FIFA eWorld Cup, and the upcoming FIFA Mobile game make it the go-to sports videogame in the world today. The game
